TOOK TO THE BOATS.

How the Volunteers Flanked the Pickets Wednesday Night.

That the Maryland volunteers are not satisfied with the manner in which the riot at Phoebus on Tuesday night ended appears from the fact that Wednesday night, after sentinels had been stationed at several points on the military highway between Old Point and the Mill Creek bridge, nearly a hundred of them succeeded in leaving the reservation in boats. After landing the men crawled away on the ground until they reached places of safety in the town. Before the guards were thrown out, however, about seventy-five regulars had succeeded in reaching Phoebus by the electric cars.

Both volunteers and artillerymen were out for trouble. They went at once to the Stieneman saloon and other nearby resorts and were in a fair way to renew hostilities when a body of soldiers from the fort arrived and placed the majority of them under archer.

People who were fortunate enough to be on the dock at Old Point at hairpast 5 o'clock last evening witnessed a magnificent spectacle. At that hour the hull of the ship Shenandoah, which caught fire near Thimble light Wednesday morning while on her way to sea, dumber laden, and after being abandoned by her crew was carried by the incoming tide back into Hampton Roads, was blown up for the purpose of testing the efficiency of the mines planted in the waters of Chesspeake Bay. After destroying the Shenandoah's rigging and cargo Monday night the flames subsided, leaving the hull practically intact.

SAYS SHE IS ABUSED.

SAYS SHE IS ABUSED.

Mrs. Lancer Undertakes Her Own Defonse.

Mrs. Julia A. Lancer of Phoebus, yesterday sent the following letter to the Daily Press Bureau:

"Phoebus, Va., June 16, 1898.

"Dear Sir.—I have been abused outrageously in the Press of late. These statements are untrue, which an investigation will prove, and your organ has been used by a certain official to abuse those whom he bears malace against. This very day your organ had an interview which they stated came from me. I never met anybody connected with the Press.

"If we had more men like Los Mastic.

if the police want to pros were then, if the police want to prose-cute the offense.

"Hoping you will give me justice by publishing this letter, I remain,

"Respectfully,
"MRS, JULIA A. LANCER."

"Respectfully,
"MRS, JULIA A. LANCER."

Mrs, Lancer is quite correct in her statement that she has never been interviewed by the Dailly Press correspondent. That is an honor of which he is not yet able to boast. She has probably fallen into the error of taking a statement made by Commonwealth's Attorney Collier and others as an interview. Mrs. Lancer, it was said—and there is not the slightest reason to doubt the truthfulness of those who quoted her declared, after she was indicted last Tuesday for keeping a house of ill fame, that she intended to regale the public with some racy information concerning a number of people well known in Hampton and also in Phoebus. There were those, however, who insisted that she would be afraid to make her words good, and the Press gave her the benefit of the doubt. Alt other statements that have been made concerning Mrs. Lancer are matters of record and may be verified at the courty clerk's office. The only sense in which the Press may be styled an organ is that of sending forth notes of warming to its readers to steer clear of the moral tangles in which she has involved herself. Mrs. Lancer, although old enough to know better than to pursue the folly with which she is charged, is still young enough to repent without exlarging the list of eleventh hour saints. Her compliment to Mr. Mastin is deserved, a fact to which every member of the grand jury that indicted her on Tuesday will bear cheerful testimony.

far their importunities have failed to yield even the promise of aldermanic consideration. Indeed, the statement was made yesterday morning that there is no immediate prospect of securing a light at that point. Host street for a considerable distance is the darkest street in town. In rainy weather the vicinity of the Willough Spring is flooded and becomes almost impassable. During the moonless period pedestrians are compelled to proceed with the greatest caution to prevent running into open gates or tumbling into the muddy ditches that skirt the unworked roadway.

There are two lights on the street, one of which stands at its intersection with Armistead avenue: This light, which does double duty, is furnished by the town. For the other the people are indebted to Judge Lee and the Board of Supervisors. Its beans shine forth from the corner of Holt and Jackson streets. The Jurors Considered Him Non Compus Mentis.

Charles Scott (colored), charged with making a victous assault on Mr. W. W. Roach last Saturday, was placed on trial in the county court vesterady Mr. Roach said that Scott called at his seloon on Queen street and requested permistion to pass into the back yard, which was granted. While there the negro kicked his dog, and, upon being told to desist, declared that if Mr. Roach came out he would also kick him. A few moments later he rentered the saloon and upon becoming disorderly, was told to get out. This inflamed him more and he raised a heavy cane and struck at Mr. Roach. The cane, as it came down, glanced on the saloon-keeper's jaw, infleting a painful bruise.

Messrs, Heresford and Wise, who appeared for the prisoner, subjected the witnesses to a rigid cross-examination, and finally got one of them to say that Roach and the negro had some words about the sale of a glass of beer.

Mr. Wise took no part in the cross-examination of the witnesses, but Mr. Heresford became severely stern in dealing with them.

Scott, the prisoner, raised his right hand, after taking his seat in the witnesse, but Mr. Heresford became severely stern in dealing with them.

Scott, the prisoner, raised his right hand, after taking his seat in the witness' chair, and soberly declared, "dat befoal God he knowed nuttlin" bout de affair." He couldn't remember heing at Foachs a sea matter of fact, he said, he didn't know anything about it until suntil suntil
